A possible student text:

As we can see from the chart above, middle school students spend most of their pocket money on entertainment and friends, clothes and hairdressing, and snacks. But they spend little money on learning materials.

In my opinion, it's wrong for students to spend money blindly, such as following the fashion or wasting their time in hanging around in the street. If they do this, they will have no time for their study and will never do well in their school work. What's more, pocket money comes from their parents, so it is their duty to make good use of every penny of it.

In a word, students should learn to manage their pocket money more wisely.
